To Bali, With Love

A US couple took a vacation and decided to help some of the island’s orphans

American Tim and Kat Taylor fell in love with Bali, Indonesia, on their honeymoon years ago. Now they live in the vibrant city of Jakarta, Indonesia’s capital. The couple returned to the island for their 10th wedding anniversary.

While on their first trip almost seven years ago, the Taylors were inspired to help orphans in Bali. They decided to adopt a few orphans for the week they were traveling with.

The epidemic of AIDS in Indonesia, and particularly its capital city, Jakarta, has increased the number of children orphaned. The Taylors realized that with their experience and skills, they could make a difference in the lives of these young people.

“We were in the orphanage, and we were really impressed with the work the director, Nindityo Adipurnomo, was doing, and agreed to sponsor three children with the orphanage, behind the name of ‘Tim and Kat program,’” Kat said.

The Taylors decided to continue their sponsorship of the orphans, and the relationship between the director of the Bali Orphanage and the Taylors developed. They started helping to raise funds for the orphanage and visited the facility on their anniversary.

“After that, we learned how many more children need support, so we asked the director to give us names for an additional eight girls,” Tim said.

When they returned to the States, the Taylors started making calls to friends and family about the work they were doing in the orphanage, and the response was overwhelming. They found like-minded people who wanted to support the work the Taylors were doing.

Tim and Kat have established the Bali Orphanage Scholarship Program, which provides scholarships to the orphans. They have also sponsored a child’s education at a local school, and have raised funds for the orphanage through various events.

Tim and Kat have been working with the Bali Orphanage Scholarship Program, and the goal is to provide a quality education for as many children as possible. The Taylors have also established a scholarship fund for the children, which will help to cover the cost of their education.

The Tim and Kat Scholarship Program has been successful in providing education for the children in the orphanage. They have helped to provide a future for the children by giving them the opportunity to learn and succeed.

“Tim and Kat have truly changed the lives of these children,” the director of the Bali Orphanage said.

The Taylors have continued to support the orphanage and the children, and have been instrumental in helping to provide a better future for them.

Marilyn Goodale, a Chicago-based lawyer, said, “I am so proud of Tim and Kat for the work they are doing. They are making a real difference in the lives of these children.”

The Taylors have been recognized for their work by various organizations, and they have received numerous awards for their efforts.

The Taylors encourage others to get involved and support the Bali Orphanage Scholarship Program. They believe that with everyone’s support, they can make a real difference in the lives of these children.

“Tim and Kat have shown us that with hard work, dedication, and爱心, we can make a difference in the world,” said Goodale.

The Taylors continue to work towards their goal of providing education for as many children as possible. They believe that with everyone’s support, they can make a real difference in the lives of these children.
